COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course will focus on situations that can make for a bad day at the office. Filled with many clinical cases, it will help you attain the satisfaction of some of the most difficult patients that include the denture patients that no one else wants to treat, implant complications and how to avoid future implant problems. There is a section on prosthodontic treatment of pediatric patients and the need for early evaluation with other specialists to set the young patient up for implant treatment either early in their life or post puberty. The last section covers the many ways that we can be more involved with our patients who have or who have had head and neck cancer. Your time spent with this informative presentation will help you make this care easier for you and the patient and expand your patient base.

COURSE OBJECTIVE

After completing this course, participants will be able to:

- Treat the most difficult of denture patients
- Recognize the complications and future issues that you may face with implants in your practice
- Implement clinical techniques to make implant treatment less stressful to you and the patient
- Learn methods to expand your prosthodontics to pediatric patients
- Know how to help the patients in your practice who have or have had head and neck cancer and grow your practice
