COURSE OBJECTIVE

The course on pediatric dentistry is divided into two parts.

Part A

This part includes presentations on understanding various aspects of a pediatric patient including development of dentition. This section focuses on preventive aspects and age appropriate anticipatory guidance. Since the data and recommendations presented in both parts are evidence-based, this section contains a presentation on how to interpret scientific evidence. Also, included in part 1 section is patient-centered care, management of ECC and evidence on effectiveness of fissure sealants.

Part B

This part is geared to treatment of pediatric dental patients. Information is presented on behavior guidance including non-pharmacological and pharmacological behavior guidance techniques. This section also has presentations on pediatric restorative care, management of deep caries, pulp therapies (vital and non-vital) in primary teeth in children, and management of orofacial trauma in children.
